

Compass Program for Academic Advancement / ONLINE

The Compass Program is an online course that provides early-career faculty and those transitioning to academic positions with an understanding of the culture of higher education. You will receive an introduction and exposure to a variety of skills needed for career advancement in many institutions— conducting educational research, grant writing, publishing articles and reports, and career planning—while enjoying the convenience and affordability of distance learning.

- 4 weekly, live sessions held online. Every session is recorded for those who miss these interactive discussions or want to view them again.
- Assignments are completed before each live session, so you can participate fully in discussions, and the instructor can cite examples from your postings to highlight effective applications of the learning materials.
- Discounts are available for any institution enrolling 3 or more faculty and for AAL alumni.
